Addressing the social and human dimension of climate change – what needs to be done
The Climate Change crisis is fundamentally a social crisis. From extreme weather patterns – such as droughts, hurricanes and wildfires – to rising sea levels, our World is undergoing an unprecedented climate crisis that is leading us to greater global inequality and increased level of extreme poverty. While everyone feels the effects of climate change, the World’s poorest people, including women and girls, are by far the most impacted by extreme weather events. A moral imperative, the developed world has a responsibility to support the most vulnerable to adapt to climate impacts. This panel seeks to discuss the social dimension of the climate crisis and what a Just Transition would entail.

I am a lawyer, but I keep being arrested when I do my job: help!
The independence of lawyers and free exercise of the legal profession is under threat around the world. Lawyers are subject to attacks and violations of their rights in staggering numbers. This panel will examine relevant protections in place for lawyers, the gaps and failures in their enforcement, and how to make improvements moving forward. We’ll hear from lawyers who have been politically targeted, persecuted and arbitrarily detained as consequence of their legal representation or advocacy. We’ll also hear from experts who are committed and mandated to protect the independence of lawyers.

Arbitrary detention: Article 9 of the ICCPR and its relevance in the third decade
Despite constitutional safeguards and Article 9 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), many states fail to enforce detention policies that meet human rights standards. One of these jurisdictions is Nigeria, where detainees are held in pre-trial detention for excessive periods in inhumane conditions, and often subjected to physical and psychological torture. During this panel, we will hear from Nigerian human rights defenders who will discuss their work to systematically and institutionally reform Nigeria’s approach to pre-trial detention. We will also hear from a member of the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, whose expertise will lend valuable a perspective upon how this climate of impunity should be addressed.

An exceptional chemical weapons tribunal: closing the chemical weapons impunity gap?

This panel will examine proposals to fill gaps in international criminal justice in cases where political deadlock leading to gaps in ICC jurisdiction have rendered justice elusive. The panel will examine, in particular, the establishment of an Exceptional Chemical Weapons Tribunal (ECWT) to prosecute state and non-state actors for the use of chemical weapons. The work behind the ECWT came to light on the 30th November, the International Day of All victims of Chemical Warfare through exclusive coverage by Reuters, which quoted diplomats, legal experts, victim voices, and heads of international organisations.

Panelists will examine the tribunal from the perspective of the principle of legality, legitimacy, jurisdiction and victims’ rights, while also discussing how such a tribunal would be situated in the current international landscape alongside the OPCW and ICC.

Gender inclusive justice for international crimes committed in Myanmar: perspectives on prevention in the future

In a dedicated report issued in 2019, the UN Fact-Finding Mission on Myanmar reported on the high prevalence of sexual and gender-based crimes allegedly being committed by the military, state security forces and armed groups across the country, and particularly in Rakhine, Kachin, and Shan States. The report reflects what local communities and civil society organisations have been saying for decades: that the persecution of ethnic groups by the Tatmadaw and others in Myanmar has gendered dimension, rooted both in historical ethnic divisions and gender inequality. No one is spared; men, women, boys, girls and LGBTIQ+ persons have all been targets of international crimes based on their gender.

In a recently published briefing paper, based on interviews with key stakeholders – including the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Court, the Independent Investigative Mechanism for Myanmar, the Gambia’s legal team in International Court of Justice proceedings, and actors pursuing universal jurisdiction – the International Commission of Jurists examines how relevant accountability bodies and actors address, or aim to address, gender-based crimes committed in Myanmar in their work. The paper considers the extent to which each body adopts a gender-competent approach in both form and substance, making recommendations regarding steps that could be taken to ensure effective accountability for these crimes.

Based on this research and the work of accountability bodies, this panel will explore the following questions:

- How are gender and intersecting identities and characteristics, including ethnicity, relevant to the commission of international crimes in Myanmar? How do they impact perpetrators’ intent and opportunity to commit gender-based crimes and the range of harms experienced by victims?
- How can we ensure a gender-competent and intersectional approach informs the life cycle of an accountability process, from how we conduct our investigation, to what charges we pursue, what evidence we lead and what reparations we seek?
- What challenges do accountability bodies and actors face when seeking to ensure they adopt effective gender-competent and intersectional approaches to justice for crimes committed in Myanmar? What can be done to overcome them?
- What is needed to ensure adjudicators have context-specific gender-competence when determining liability for crimes under international law?

The organisers may at any time, with or without giving notice, in their absolute discretion and without giving any reason, cancel or postpone the Conference, change its venue or any of the other published particulars, or withdraw any invitation to attend. In any case, neither the organisers nor any of their officers, employees, agents, members or representatives shall be liable for any loss, liability, damage or expense suffered or incurred by any person, nor will they return any money paid to them in connection with the Conference unless they are satisfied not only that the money in question remains under their control but also that the person who paid it has been unfairly prejudiced (as to which, decision shall be in their sole and unfettered discretion and, when announced, final and conclusive).

Continuing Professional Development/Continuing Legal Education

For Conference delegates from jurisdictions where CPD/CLE is mandatory, the IBA will provide a Certificate of Attendance for the Conference. Code of conduct

By booking the conference, you agree to the following delegate code of conduct, the host country’s local and/or national requirements and venues restrictions and precautions:

• You will not attend the conference if you are displaying symptoms of a communicable disease. Should you develop symptoms during your attendance at the conference you inform a member of IBA staff by email (haesung.lee@int-bar.org) and you agree not to attend any further conference sessions or related events and comply with all local and national restrictions.

• You travel at your own risk, and you agree that the IBA cannot be held responsible if you contract a communicable disease during the conference or after returning from the conference.

• You agree to the extent permitted by law that you shall not hold IBA responsible for: any travel costs incurred for travelling to and from the conference; any travel costs that may be irrecoverable due to the cancellation or postponement of the conference; any losses or liabilities associated with contracting a communicable disease whether on the way to, during or after the conference.

• You agree that, if asked by the relevant local or national authorities, the IBA has permission to pass on your personal information and contact details to those authorities should contact tracing be required.

No deductions or withholdings

All fees payable to us by you in accordance with the terms contained in the ‘Information’ section shall be paid free and clear of all deductions or withholdings whatsoever.

If any deductions or withholdings are required by law to be made from any fees payable to us by you under the terms contained in this ‘Information’ section you shall pay such sum as will, after the deduction or withholding has been made, leave us with the same amount as we would have been entitled to receive in the absence of any such requirement to make a deduction or withholding.

If we obtain the benefit of any tax credit or other relief by reference to any such deductions or withholdings, then we shall repay to you such amount as, after such repayment has been made, will leave us in no worse position than we would have been had no such deductions or withholdings been required.

Conference sell-outs

The IBA places its conferences in venues of a suitable size for each event; however, there are times when our conferences may sell out. Should this happen, prospective delegates will be informed, and a waiting list will operate. The waiting list will function on a ‘first come, first served’ basis, subject to receiving delegate cancellations. The waiting list for a conference will close once it has reached ten per cent of the conference venue capacity, as it is very unlikely a place will become available. The IBA will not be liable for any travel or accommodation expenses incurred by an individual who travels to a conference without a confirmed place at the event.

Promotional literature

Please note that no individual or organisation may display or distribute publicity material or other printed matter during the Conference, unless by prior arrangement with the IBA. About the IBA

The International Bar Association (IBA), established in 1947, is the world's leading organisation of international legal practitioners, bar associations, law firms and law societies.

The IBA influences the development of international law reform and shapes the future of the legal profession throughout the world. It has a membership of more than 80,000 individual lawyers and more than 190 bar associations and law societies spanning over 170 countries.

Inspired by the vision of the United Nations, the IBA was founded in the same spirit, just before the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was proclaimed in 1948.

The IBA covers all practice areas and professional interests, providing members with access to leading experts and up-to-date information, enabling them to better represent their clients’ interests.

Through its various committees, fora, and task forces, the IBA facilitates the exchange of information and views among its members as to laws, practices and professional responsibilities relating to the practice of law around the globe.

IBA Human Rights Law Committee

The Human Rights Law Committee (HRLC) aims to promote human rights in all areas of the legal profession, as well as in the broader community. We welcome your contributions, either through newsletter article submissions, becoming an officer, or presenter at conferences. The value of membership is most enhanced through active participation, so please get involved.
